

The Foundation for Aging Studies and Exercise Science
Research
A Guideline for Applicants

Made possible by a generous gift by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Borgenicht and, The Borgenicht Family Foundation, The Foundation for Aging Studies and Exercise Science Research (TFASESR) supports research in the areas of aging studies and exercise science. Applications will be judged on their potential to contribute to the understanding of the aging process and their potential for helping people live longer, healthier and more productive lives. Faculty directed faculty-student research projects are particularly encouraged. A special feature of TFASESR is its interdisciplinary focus. Researchers and students from various disciplines bring theory, methodology, and experience to bear on the analysis of the aging process to provide knowledge and accessible programs that will enrich people's lives. Therefore, applications from a variety of disciplines are welcome.

Deadline: Applications must be postmarked by March 1. Awards will generally be announced within two months.

Terms: Grants for up to $5,000 will be for the summer of the application year with a progress report due by September 15.
